Teen Skills Institute

Dating violence is a hidden epidemic for teens in Canada. As many as one in three will experience violence in a dating relationship.

When you consider this alarming statistic, and our popular culture that normalizes hyper-sexualization and violence, it becomes easy to see how girls can start to believe that extreme jealousy, and possessive or controlling behavior, are signs of love, not abuse.

For over 15 years, the Canadian Women's Foundation has been investing in programs that teach teens - girls and boys - how to create healthy relationships of all kinds, with their family, friends and dating partners. These programs include media literacy, ways to show mutual respect in relationships, tips for making safe dating choices, and the warning signs of abuse. The work is often co-led by adults and youth, so that participants feel like they are learning from peers.

In 2012, we were excited to hold the National Skills Institute on Teen Healthy Relationship Programming, a three-day event and the first of its kind in Canada.

We brought together 50 youth leaders, as well as adult program representatives, school personnel and policymakers, from 100 organizations across the country - including 12 representatives from Alberta. Delegates built their knowledge about how to work effectively with youth, learned about best practices, showcased innovative programming, and learned about how social media is affecting bullying and abuse.

Youth leaders played an integral role in the Institute: they shared inspiring stories about transforming relationships in their own schools, and engaged in their own peer-led session developed and facilitated by the inspiring leaders of our Youth Advisory Committee.

At the conclusion of the event, youth delegates shared their learning, best practices and recommendations for the future. The Institute was a great success and another step toward turning the tide on this critical issue.

The Institute was part of a larger National Learning Strategy on Healthy Relationships, funded by Status of Women Canada.

Human trafficking of women and girls for the purpose of sexual exploitation

The Canadian Women's Foundation is committed to ending the human trafficking of women and girls for the purpose of sexual exploitation in Canada, and in 2012 invested $130,500 in programs that will help to end this extreme form of violence against women. This is part of a broader $2 million investment we are continuing to roll out in 2013.

The money will be used to fund programs that help women and girls escape sexual exploitation and rebuild their lives; conduct research; and bring together experts, survivors and community leaders in a Task Force on Trafficking of Women and Girls in Canada.

You help women move out of poverty.

My father always used to say,
“You can be financially wealthy but personally bankrupt.” The Foundation’s work gives me a way to explain to my children that, as a family, we are helping other moms move out of the circle of poverty and create a better life for themselves.

Canadian Women’s Foundation Leadership Institute at the Coady Institute

In 2012, the Foundation launched the first Canadian Women’s Foundation Leadership Institute at the Coady Institute at St. Francis Xavier University. The Institute will build the capacity of women who are emerging leaders in the field of economic development work with low-income women in Canada.

The 3-year pilot program will train up to 25 diverse women leaders each year and will include leadership education that is grounded in a commitment to economic and social justice.

The women will participate in two residential training programs focusing on leadership self-assessments and building women-centred leadership skills. During the year between residential programs, they’ll work on individual learning plans and activities, distance learning, and networking with national leaders. Each will have a mentor and coaching.

We all know that strong leaders make for strong organizations and communities. We’re delighted to invest in the next generation of women leaders who will make a difference in the work to help women move out of poverty.

I was in a health food store and mentioned to one of the staff that we support the Canadian Women's Foundation through purchase proceeds from our WomenSense line. She started to cry. She had just that morning hoped for a way to connect with the Foundation as they had helped her when she was being abused and forced to live in a shelter with her 4 children. This is why we do what we do! We are proud supporters and grateful for the work the Canadian Women's Foundation does to help women protect themselves and their family from violence and poverty.

For more than twelve years, the Royal LePage Shelter Foundation has been honoured to partner with the Canadian Women's Foundation on the Violence Prevention Grants program. Our supporters – Royal LePage brokers, agents, managers and staff – are committed to helping women and children who have experienced abuse. We know that in order to stop the cycle of violence, we must support programs that prevent violence, that help youth develop healthy relationships, and that give women and children the resources they need to rebuild their lives free from violence. The Canadian Women's Foundation possesses the unique expertise, perspective, approach and depth of community support that makes them an ideal partner. We are grateful to the Canadian Women's Foundation for enabling us to achieve our mission.

I support the Canadian Women's Foundation because the programs that are funded for women and girls across Canada provide more than just money; these programs help to build confidence, provide mentorship, and change lives. I have received so much support from mentors and friends in my life, and this is my opportunity to give back. I am continually inspired by the work and vision of the organization and I am proud to be a donor.
